PREFACE

---

To Amalthæa, the nurse of his infancy, Zeus gave a magic horn of plenty, which by his grace was over-brimming no matter what was taken from it. This NEW EDITION of a standard work, like the famous cornucopia, contains a freshened and replenished store. In the garnering of this rich harvest of fruits culled from the vast fields of literature, tribute has been taken from every tree in our literary Eden, so that the reader may share in common with his fellow creatures, not only the kindly fruits of the earth, but also the golden apples plucked from the tree of the knowledge of good and of evil. Since divine discontent is wholesome, we may expect to find some apples of discord as well as of love, the apples of Sodom and of Cain, and a modicum of dead sea fruit. Something there will be of distasteful growth, but the weed's plain heart holds a secret though 'tis shallow rooted. Many a wayside flower in a crannied nook has carried a message to an humble heart, and because its bloom has attracted public attention, it warrants a place among the choicer blossoms in this horn of plenty filled for all sorts and conditions of men.

The effort of the compiler has been to make the collection the most complete that has ever been gathered within the covers of a book. There has been provided

"Fruit of all kinds, in coat

Rough, or smooth rind, or bearded husk, or shell " of which Milton sang in Paradise Lost

In seeking enrichment of his own ideas, a speaker or writer is more concerned with the flavor and odor of the flower or fruit than with its progenitor, therefore the compiler, in gathering and preserving the "wisdom of the wise and experience of the ages," labels each specimen according to its quality (Topical arrangement) rather than source (Author arrangement)

The latter need is amply met by a biographical index wherein authors are paged. Thus like is with like, and an index to topics, with cross references, links up combinations of relating attraction

The phrases which are "the parole of literary men the world over," form the basic value of the work. The compiler's blue pencil has hesitated over the prolific output of the "moderns," for public taste is fickle and what is popular to-day is padding to-morrow

In these stirring times the press has teemed with utterances of prominent people, but records are inaccurate and unreliable, as has been tested through personal letters

Locke states: "He that has but ever so little examined the citations of writers cannot doubt how little credit the quotations deserve where the originals are wanting, and consequently, how much less quotations of quotations can be relied on "

Many omissions may be accounted for by the fact that men of action often prefer the gold of silence to the speech of silver, but on the whole, the Biographical Index is a Who's Who of authors of all times

It has not been easy to follow Dr. Routh's advice, "always to verify your references," for editions, texts and authorities differ. At times only a hint of an authority has been available, but rather than lose an item of value it has been deemed best to retain a meager suggestion in hope of future discovery

It may be claimed for this work, without fear of contradiction, that no other of its kind contains so full an array of material under topics; none with such a representation of modern writers and speakers, no other includes such a record of modern war phrases, songs and poems, nowhere else are kindred thoughts and expressions so closely connected by cross references that they may be compared, and in no other collection of quotations have the nerves and arteries of the contents been laid open so plainly through so comprehensive and complete a concordance

Topics have been chosen for their general character, so that similar ideas might not be too widely separated, which is a fault of too detailed subdivision

The compiler takes comfort in the words of Cotton Mather "Reader, Carthage was of the mind that unto those three things which the ancients held to be impossible, there should be added this fourth, to find a book without Erratas It seems the hands of Briareus and the eyes of Argus will not prevent them "

Whatever degree this work has attained in the achievement of the impossible, it owes to MR LEANDER J DEBEKKER, the Briareus and Argus of the printed page and its literary contents Appreciation and gratitude are but feebly expressed in this tribute to his services

Acknowledgment is due to MESSRS HARPER & BROS for permission to use the lines written by Peter Newell found on pages 280 and 532.

PLAN OF THE BOOK, AND DIRECTIONS FOR USING IT

The reader is reminded that this work is a book of literary gems selected with a view to their usefulness in suggesting ideas for practical application in literary composition and not a mere collection of familiar quotations to serve as a remembrancer to such as may wish to refresh their memories. Therefore, quotations drawn from standard authors and familiar in our mouths as household words, have not been included because concordances of the works of these authors already exist. Every student of Shakespeare should know of the concordances to Shakespeare, Wordsworth, and other poets.

The quotations are arranged under topics according to their general meaning, sense, or idea. The topics are in alphabetical order, as are the authors under the topics. An Index to Topics, with cross reference to kindred ones, will be found on page xi.

The Concordance at the end of the book is a word-index of the text of each quotation. Identifying words are generously indexed, so that the lines may be traced through several channels in case the memory fails in exact reading. Enough of the context is given to identify the lines. After each excerpt the page and numerical order on the page is noted.

The Biographical Index is a record of men and women of all ages and nationalities whose words, thoughts, and visions have been passed along into the minds and speech of the people. Under each author's full name is given his nationality, dates of birth and death (L for living), also a brief character sketch, and the numbers of the pages whereon his lines appear.

To find an appropriate quotation for a definite subject, turn to a topic dealing with such an idea, and consult the Topical Index for related headings.

For the exact text of a quotation, or its authority, consult the Concordance. When exact words are not remembered try synonymous ones, or topics on such subjects. If the author alone is remembered, consult the Biographical Index.

When a topic does not give all that may be sought on a subject, consult the Concordance as quotations may contain, as a whole, ideas which have placed them elsewhere.

When quotations from a special author only are desired, consult the Biographical Index where pages are given on which are found that author's lines.

When modern authors are wanted, choose from the Biographical Index, according to dates given of birth and death.

To find priority of authorship, consult Biographical Index for dates of authors' birth and death.

The plays and poems of Shakespeare and the books of the Bible are given in italics without the names of the authors.

Full names of well-known authors are often omitted.

Popular abbreviations and pen-names are given when established as better known to the public (Bernard Shaw, Oscar Wilde, George Eliot, Artemus Ward). The Biographical Index supplies full names and has ample cross references.

ACTING, THE STAGE (See also WORLD)

Farce follow'd Comedy, and reach'd her prime,
In ever-laughing Foote's fantastic time,
Mad wag! who pardon'd none, nor spared the best,

And turn'd some very serious things to jest
Nor church nor state escaped his public sneers, Arms nor the gown, priests, lawyers, volunteers,
"Alas, poor Yorick!" now forever mute!

Whoever loves a laugh must sigh for Foote
We smile, perforce, when histrionic scenes
Ape the swain dialogue of kings and queens,
When "Chrononhotonthologos must die,"
And Arthur struts in mimic majesty

There's hardly one (I may say none) who stands

The Artist is a rare, rare breed There were but two, forsooth,

In all me time (the stage's prime!) and The Other One was Booth

EDMUND VANCE COOKE—The Other One was Booth

I think I love and reverence all arts equally, only putting my own just above the others, because in it I recognize the union and culmination of my own To me it seems as if when God conceived the world, that was Poetry, He formed it, and that was Sculpture, He colored it, and that was Painting, He peopled it with living beings and that was the grand, divine, eternal Drama

CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN

See, how these rascals use me! They will not let my play run, and yet they steal my thunder

JOHN DENNIS—See Biographia Britannica
Vol V P 103

<sup>14</sup>
Like hungry guests, a sitting audience looks
Plays are like suppers, poets are the cooks
The founder's you the table is this place
The carvers we the prologue is the grace
Each act, a course, each scene, a different dish,
Though we're in Lent I doubt you're still for flesh

Satire's the sauce, high-season'd, sharp and rough

Kind masks and beaux, I hope you're pepper-proof?

Wit is the wine, but 'tis so scarce the true
Poets, like vintners, balderdash and brew
Your surly scenes where rant and bloodshed join

Are butcher's meat, a battle's sirlorn

- 13 All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players
They have their exits and their entrances,
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages At first the infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms
And then the whining school-boy, with his satchel
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school And then the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad
Made to his mistress' eyebrow Then a soldier,
Full of strange oaths and bearded like the pard,
Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation
Even in the cannon's mouth And then the justice,
In fair round belly with good capon lined,
With eyes severe and beard of formal out,
Full of wise saws and modern instances,
And so he plays his part The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloons,
With spectacles on nose and pouch on side,
His youthful hose, well saved, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank, and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness and mere oblivion,
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans every thing

Just what is it that America stands for? If she stands for one thing more than another, it is for the sovereignty of self-governing people, and her example, her assistance, her encouragement, has thrilled two continents in this western world with all those fine impulses which have built up human liberty on both sides of the water. She stands, therefore, as an example of independence, as an example of free institutions, and as an example of disinterested international action in the main tenets of justice

WOODROW WILSON—Speech Pittsburgh, Jan

We want the spirit of America to be efficient, we want American character to be efficient, we want American character to display itself in what I may, perhaps, be allowed to call spiritual efficiency—clear, disinterested thinking and fearless action along the right lines of thought.
America is not anything if it consists of each of us. It is something only if it consists of all of us, and it can consist of all of us only as our spirits are banded together in a common enterprise.
That common enterprise is the enterprise of liberty and justice and right. And, therefore, I, for my part, have a great enthusiasm for rendering America spiritually efficient, and that conception lies at the basis of what seems very far removed from it, namely, the plans that have been proposed for the military efficiency of this nation

ANGLING (See also FISH)
A rod twelve feet long and a ring of wire,
A winder and barrel, will help thy desire
In killing a Pike, but the forked stick,
With a slit and a bladder,—and that other fine trick,
Which our artists call snap, with a goose or a duck,—
Will kill two for one, if you have any luck,
The gentry of Shropshire do merrily smile,
To see a goose and a belt the fish to beguile,
When a Pike suns himselfe and a-frogging doth go,
The two-inch hook is better, I know,
Than the ord'nary snaring but still I must cry,
When the Pike is at home, munde the cookery

We may say of angling as Dr Boteler said of strawberries "Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did", and so, (if I might be judge,) God never did make a more calm, quiet, innocent recreation than angling

Antiquity, what is it else (God only excepted) but man's authority born some ages before us?
Now for the truth of things time makes no alteration, things are still the same they are, let the time be past, present, or to come

Those things which we reverence for antiquity what were they at their first birth? Were they false?—time cannot make them true Were they true?—time cannot make them more true

The circumstances therefore of time in respect of truth and error is merely impetinent

APPLE

Pyrus Malus

10 What plant we in this apple tree? Sweets for a hundred flowery springs To load the May-wind's restless wings, When, from the orchard-row, he pours Its fragrance through our open doors,

A world of blossoms for the bee, Flowers for the sick girl's silent room, For the glad infant sprigs of bloom,

We plant with the apple tree

13 There's plenty of boys that will come hankering and gruvvelling around when you've got an apple and beg the core off you, but when they've got one, and you beg for the core, and remind them how you give them a core one time, they make a mouth at you, and say thank you 'most to death, but there ain't a-going to be no core

WM WALLACE HARNEY—Adonais

15 And what is more melancholy than the old apple-trees that linger about the spot where once stood a homestead, but where there is now only a ruined chimney rising out of a grassy and weed-grown cellar? They offer their fruit to every wayfarer—apples that are bitter-sweet with the moral of time's vicissitude

16 The Blossoms and leaves in plenty From the apple tree fall each day,

And with them merrily play

17 To satisfy the sharp desire I had Of tasting those fair apples, I resolv'd Not to defer, hunger and thirst at once Powerful persuaders, quicken'd at the scent Of that alluring fruit, urged me so keen

Sat a maiden and her lover,
And the thoughts within her he Yearned, in silence, to discover

Hung in rich profusion o'er them

Grandeur * * * consists in form, and not in size and to the eye of the philosopher, the curve drawn on a paper two inches long, is just as magnificent, just as symbolic of divine mysteries and melodies, as when embodied in the span of some cathedral roof

The architect
Built his great heart into these sculptured stones,

<sup>1</sup> Better the rudest work that tells a story or records a fact, than the richest without meaning. There should not be a single ornament put upon great civic buildings, without some intellectual intention.

RUSKIN—Seven Lamps of Architecture The Lamp of Memory

<sup>2</sup> It was stated, * * * that the value of architecture depended on two distinct characters—the one, the impression it receives from human power, the other, the image it bears of the natural creation.

RUSKIN—Seven Lamps of Architecture The Lamp of Beauty

<sup>3</sup> I would have, then, our ordinary dwelling-houses built to last, and built to be lovely, as rich and full of pleasantness as may be within and without * * * with such differences as might suit and express each man's character and occupation, and partly his history.

RUSKIN—Seven Lamps of Architecture The Lamp of Memory

<sup>4</sup> Therefore when we build, let us think that we build (public edifices) forever. Let it not be for present delight, nor for present use alone, let it be such work as our descendants will thank us for, and let us think, as we lay stone on stone, that a time is to come when those stones will be held sacred because our hands have touched them, and that men will say as they look upon the labor and wrought substance of them, "See! this our fathers did for us."

RUSKIN—Seven Lamps of Architecture The Lamp of Memory

<sup>5</sup> We require from buildings, as from men, two kinds of goodness: first, the doing their practical duty well; then that they be graceful and pleasing in doing it, which last is itself another form of duty.

RUSKIN—The Stones of Venice Vol I Ch II

<sup>6</sup> Architecture is the work of nations.

RUSKIN—True and Beautiful Sculpture

<sup>7</sup> No person who is not a great sculptor or painter, can be an architect. If he is not a sculptor or painter, he can only be a builder.

RUSKIN—True and Beautiful Sculpture

<sup>8</sup> Ornamentation is the principal part of architecture, considered as a subject of fine art.

<sup>15</sup> Much might be said on both sides.

ADDISON—Spectator No 122

<sup>16</sup> Where we desire to be informed 'tis good to contest with men above ourselves, but to confirm and establish our opinions, 'tis best to argue with judgments below our own, that the frequent spoils and victories over their reasons may settle in ourselves an esteem and confirmed opinion of our own.

AUTUMN

15
Now Autumn's fire burns slowly along the woods,

And day by day the dead leaves fall and melt,
And night by night the monitory blast
Wails in the key-hole, telling how it pass'd
O'er empty fields, or upland solitudes,
Or grim wide wave, and now the power is felt
Of melancholy, tenderer in its moods
Than any joy indulgent Summer dealt

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM—Day and Night Songs
Autumnal Sonnet

16
O Autumn, laden with fruit, and stained
With the blood of the grape, pass not, but sit Beneath my shady roof, there thou mayest rest
And tune thy jolly voice to my fresh pipe,
And all the daughters of the year shall dance!
Sing now the lusty song of fruits and flowers.

WILLIAM BLAKE—To Autumn St 1

Earth's crammed with heaven,
And every common bush afire with God,
And only he who sees takes off his shoes,
The rest sit round it and pluck blackberries

Autumn wins you best by this, its mute
Appeal to sympathy for its decay

ROBERT BROWNING—Paracelsus Sc 1

Glorious are the woods in their latest gold and crimson,
Yet our full-leaved willows are in their freshest green

Such a kindly autumn, so mercifully dealing With the growths of summer, I never yet have seen

BRYANT—Third of November

The mellow autumn came, and with it came
The promised party, to enjoy its sweets

The corn is cut, the manor full of game;
The pointer ranges, and the sportsman beats
In russet jacket,—lynx-like is his aim,

Full grows his bag, and wonderful his feats Ah, nutbrown partridges! Ah, brilliant pheasants!

And ah, ye poachers!—"Tis no sport for peasants
BYRON—Don Juan. Canto XIII St 75

23
Yellow, mellow, ripened days,
Sheltered in a golden coating,
O'er the dreamy, listless haze,
White and dainty cloudlets floating,

Winking at the blushing trees,
And the sombre, furrowed fallow,
Smiling at the airy ease,
Of the southward flying swallow

Sweet and smiling are thy ways,
Beauteous, golden Autumn days
WILL CARLETON—Autumn Days

1
A breath, whence no man knows,
Swaying the grating weeds, it blows,
It comes, it grieves, it goes
Once it rocked the summer rose
JOHN VANCE CHENEY—Passing of Autumn

2
I saw old Autumn in the misty morn
Stand shadowless like silence, listening
To silence, for no lonely bird would sing
Into his hollow ear from woods forlorn,
Nor lowly hedge nor solitary thorn,—
Shaking his languid locks all dewy bright
With tangled gossamer that fell by night,
Pearling his coronet of golden corn
HOOD—Ode Autumn

The Autumn is old,
The sere leaves are flying,

Old age, begun sighing!

Season of mists and mellow fruitfulness!
Close bosom-friend of the maturing sun,

To bend with apples the moss'd cottage trees,
And fill all fruit with ripeness to the core

It was Autumn, and incessant
Piped the quails from shocks and sheaves,
And, like living coals, the apples
Burned among the withering leaves
LONGFELLOW—Pegasus in Pound

8
What visionary tints the year puts on,
When falling leaves falter through motionless air
Or numbly cling and shiver to be gone!
How shimmer the low flats and pastures bare,
As with her nectar Hebe Autumn fills
The bowl between me and those distant hills,
And smiles and shakes abroad her misty, tremulous hair!
LOWELL—An Indian Summer Revere

The warm sun is failing, the bleak wind is wail-dead,

Is lying
Come, months, come away,

1
How are the veins of thee, Autumn, laden?
    Umbered juices,
    And pulp'd oozes
    Pappy out of the cherry-bruises,
Froth the veins of thee, wild, wild maiden
    With hair that musters
    In globed clusters,
    In tumbling clusters, like swarthy grapes,
Round thy brow and thine ears o'ershaden,
With the burning darkness of eyes like pansies,
    Like velvet pansies
    Where through escapes
The splendid might of thy conflagrate fancies,
With robe gold-tawny not hiding the shapes
    Of the feet whereunto it falleth down,
    Thy naked feet unsandalled,
With robe gold-tawny that does not veil
    Feet where the red
    Is meshed in the brown,
Like a rubied sun in a Venice-sail

AWKWARDNESS

13
Awkward, embarrassed, stiff, without the skill
Of moving gracefully or standing still,
One leg, as if suspicious of his brother
Desirous seems to run away from t'other
    CHURCHILL—Rosciad L 438

Have you not heard the poets tell How came the dainty Baby Bell
Into this world of ours?

T B ALDRICH—Baby Bell

Little pretty infant wiles

How lovely he appears! his little cheeks
In their pure incarnation, vying with
The rose leaves strewn beneath them
And his lips, too,
How beautifully parted! No; you shall not

His hour of mudday rest is nearly over
BYRON—Can. Act III Sc 1 L 14

The pleasures of a parent.

He is so little to be so large!
Why, a train of cars, or a whale-back barge Couldn't carry the freight
Of the monstrous weight
Of all of his qualities, good and great
And tho' one view is as good as another,
Don't take my word for it Ask his mother!

"The hand that rocks the cradle"—but there is no such hand
It is bad to rock the baby, they would have us understand,
So the cradle's but a relic of the former foolish

When they jounced them and they bounced

What is the little one thinking about?
Very wonderful things, no doubt,
Unwritten history!
Unfathomed mystery!

Yet he laughs and cries, and eats and drinks,
And chuckles and crows, and nods and winks,
As if his head were as full of kinks
And curious riddles as any sphinx!

When the baby died,
On every side
Rose stranger's voices, hard and harsh and loud

The baby was not wrapped in any shroud

Her misery

I've now got the music book ready,
Do sit up and sing like a lady

BEE

The honey-bee that wanders all day long
The field, the woodland, and the garden o'er,
To gather in his fragrant winter store,
Humming in calm content his winter song,
Seeks not alone the rose's glowing breast,
The hily's dainty cup, the violet's lips,
But from all rank and noxious weeds he sips
The single drop of sweetness closely pressed
Within the poison chalice

11 For so work the honey-bees,
Creatures that by a rule in nature teach
The act of order to a peopled kingdom
They have a king and officers of sorts,

BELLS

7
Hark! the bonny Christ-Church bells,
One, two, three, four, five, six,
They sound so woundy great,
So wound'rous sweet,
And they troul so merrily

How soft the music of those village bells,
Falling at intervals upon the ear
In cadence sweet, now dying all away,
Now pealing loud again, and louder still,
Clear and sonorous, as the gale comes on!
With easy force it opens all the cells
Where Memory slept

The bells themselves are the best of preachers,
Their brazen lips are learned teachers,
From their pulpits of stone, in the upper air,
Sounding aloft, without crack or flaw,
Shriller than trumpets under the Law,
Now a sermon and now a prayer
LONGFELLOW—*Christus The Golden Legend

Hear the sledges with the bells,
Silver bells!
What a world of merriment their melody foretells!
How they tinkle, tinkle, tinkle,
In the icy air of night,
While the stars that oversprinkle
All the Heavens seem to twinkle
With a crystalline delight
Keeping time, time, time,
In a sort of Runic rhyme
To the tintinnabulation that so musically wells
From the bells, bells, bells, bells,
Bells, bells, bells—
From the jingling and the tinging of the bells
POE—The Bells St 1

Hear the mellow wedding bells,
Golden bells!
What a world of happiness their harmony foretells

And thus be the vocation fit,
For which the founder fashioned it
High, high above earth's life, earth's labor
E'en to the heaven's blue vault to soar
To hover as the thunder's neighbor
The very firmament explore
To be a voice as from above
Like yonder stars so bright and clear,

That praise their Maker as they move,
And usher in the circling year
Tun'd be its metal mouth alone
To things eternal and sublime
And as the swift wing'd hours speed on May it record the flight of time!

Hark, how chimes the passing bell!
There's no music to a knell,
All the other sounds we hear,
Flatter, and but cheat our ear
Thus doth put us still in mind
That our flesh must be resigned,
And, a general silence made,
The world be muffled in a shade

Whoe'er has gone thro' London street,
Has seen a butcher gazing at his meat,

And how he keeps

How he admires his halves

And quarters—and his calves,

As if in truth upon his own legs grown

CANARY

Thou should'st be carolling thy Maker's praise,
Poor bird! now fetter'd, and here set to draw,
With graceless toil of beak and added claw,
The meagre food that scarce thy want allays!
And this—to gratify the gloating gaze
Of fools, who value Nature not a straw,
But know to prize the infraction of her law
And hard perversion of her creatures' ways!
Thee the wild woods await, in leaves attired,
Where notes of liquid utterance should engage Thy bill, that now with pain scant forage earns

Sing a roundelay,—
'Tis the latest flower of Spring
Coming with the May!

23 How sweet to move at summer's eve
By Clyde's meandering stream,
When Sol in joy is seen to leave
The earth with crimson beam,
When islands that wandered far
Above his sea couch lie,
And here and there some gem-like star
Re-opes its sparkling eye

In Koln, a town of monks and bones,
And pavement fang'd with murderous stones,
And rags and hags, and hideous wenches,
I counted two-and-seventy stenches,
All well defined, and several stinks!
Ye nymphs that reign o'er sewers and sinks,
The River Rhine, it is well known,
Doth wash your city of Cologne,
But tell me, nymphs! what power divine
Shall henceforth wash the River Rhine?

A man must serve his time to every trade
Save censure—critics all are ready made
Take hackney'd jokes from Miller, got by rote,
With just enough of learning to misquote,
A mind well skill'd to find or forge a fault,
A turn for punning, call it Attic salt,
To Jeffrey go, be silent and discreet,
His pay is just ten sterling pounds per sheet,
Fear not to lie, 'twill seem a lucky hit,

And stand a critic, hated yet caress'd

DAY

3 Listen to the Exhortation of the Dawn!
Look to this Day! For it is Life,
The very Life of Life
In its brief course lie all the Vertues
And Realities of your Existence,
The Bliss of Growth,
The Glory of Action,
The Splendor of Beauty,
For Yesterday is but a Dream,
And Tomorrow is only a Vision,
But Today well lived
Makes every Yesterday a Dream of Happiness,
And every Tomorrow a Vision of Hope
Look well therefore to this Day!
Such is the Salutation of the Dawn

Destroys, remakes, for His own pleasure, all

On a lone barren isle, where the wild roaring billows
Assail the stern rock, and the loud tempests rave,
The hero lies still, while the dew-drooping willows,
Like fond weeping mourners, lean over his grave
The lightnings may flash and the loud thunders rattle,
He heeds not, he hears not, he's free from all pain
He sleeps his last sleep, he has fought his last battle,
No sound can awake him to glory again!

15 It is the hour when from the boughs
The nightingale's high note is heard,
It is the hour when lovers' vows
Seem sweet in every whispered word,
And gentle winds, and waters near,
Make music to the lonely ear
Each flower the dews have lightly wet,
And in the sky the stars are met,
And on the wave is deeper blue,
And on the leaf a browner hue,
And in the heaven that clear obscure,
So softly dark, and darkly pure

Her eye (I'm very fond of handsome eyes)
Was large and dark, suppressing half its fire
Until she spoke, then through its soft disguise

FLOWERS (Unclassified)

14
Sweet letters of the angel tongue,
I've loved ye long and well,
And never have failed in your fragrance sweet
To find some secret spell,—
A charm that has bound me with witching power,
For mine is the old belief,
That midst your sweets and midst your bloom,
There's a soul in every leaf!
M M BALLOU—Flowers

15
Take the flower from my breast, I pray thee,

the hollyhock

Janus am I, oldest of potentates!
Forward I look and backward and below
I count—as god of avenues and gates—
The years that through my portals come and go

I chase the wild-fowl from the frozen fen,
My frosts congeal the rivers in their flow,
My fires light up the hearths and hearts of men

There is what I call the American idea * * * This idea demands, as the proximate organization thereof, a democracy,—that is, a government of all the people, by all the people, for all the people, of course, a government of the principles of eternal justice, the unchanging law of God, for shortness' sake I will call it the idea of Freedom

Campanula Rotundifolia

I love the fair lilies and roses so gay,
They are rich in their pride and their splendor,
But still more do I love to wander away
To the meadow so sweet,
Where down at my feet,
The harebell blooms modest and tender

Thou didst attract my childish view,
Almost resembling

3
Simplest of blossoms! To mine eye
Thou bring'st the summer's painted sky;
The May-thorn greening in the nook,
The minnows sporting in the brook,
The bleat of flocks, the breath of flowers,
The song of birds amid the bowers,
The crystal of the azure seas,
The music of the southern breeze,
And, over all, the blessed sun,
Telling of halcyon days begun
MOIR—The Harebell

HEN

Alas! my child, where is the Pen
That can do justice to the Hen?
Like Royalty, she goes her way,
Laying foundations every day,
Though not for Public Buildings, yet
For Custard, Cake and Omelette
Or if too old for such a use
They have their fling at some abuse
As when to censure Plays Unfit
Upon the stage they make a Hit
Or at elections seal the Fate
Of an Obnoxious Candidate
No wonder, Child, we prize the Hen,
Whose Egg is Mightier than the Pen

HOLIDAYS

The second day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward forevermore.

JOHN ADAMS—Letter to Mrs Adams July 3, 1776

<sup>8</sup>
There were his young barbarians all at play
There was their Dacian mother—he, their sire, Butcher'd to make a Roman holiday
BYRON—Childe Harold Canto IV St 141

And that was the way
The deuce was to pay
As it always is, at the close of the day
That gave us—

(With some restrictions, the fault-finders say)
That which, please God, we will keep for aye
Our National Independence!
WILL CARLETON—How We Kept the Day

The holiest of all holidays are those Kept by ourselves in silence and apart,
The secret anniversaries of the heart,
When the full river of feeling overflows,—
The happy days unclouded to their close,
The sudden joys that out of darkness start
As flames from ashes, swift desires that dart Like swallows singing down each wind that blows!

There came to the beach a poor exile of Erin,

But the day star attracted his eyes' sad devotion,
For it rose o'er his own native isle of the ocean,

1
The Jackdaw sat in the Cardinal's chair!
Bishop and Abbot and Prior were there,
Many a monk and many a friar,
Many a knight and many a squire,
With a great many more of lesser degree,—
In sooth a goodly company,
And they served the Lord Primate on bended knee

Never, I ween,
Was a prouder seen,
Read of in books or dreamt of in dreams,
Than the Cardinal Lord Archbishop of Rheims R H BARHAM—Ingoldsby Legends The Jackdaw of Rheims

2
An old miser kept a tame jackdaw, that used to steal pieces of money, and hide them in a hole, which a cat observing, asked, "Why he would hoard up those round shining things that he could make no use of?" "Why," said the jackdaw, "my master has a whole chestful, and makes no more use of them than I do."
SWIFT—Thoughts on Various Subjects

JANUARY

3 Janus was invoked at the commencement of most actions, even in the worship of the other gods the votary began by offering wine and incense to Janus. The first month in the year was named from him, and under the title of Matu-tinus he was regarded as the opener of the day.
Hence he had charge of the gates of Heaven, and hence, too, all gates, Januæ, were called after him, and supposed to be under his care.
Hence, perhaps, it was, that he was represented with a staff and key, and that he was named the Opener (Patulus), and the Shutter (Clusius).

Jas in the Arab language is despair,
And Min the darkest meaning of a lie

How justly doth a lie
Draw on its head despair!
Among the fragrant spirits of the bowers

LELAND—Jessamine

8
Among the flowers no perfume is like mine,
That which is best in me comes from within

Should seek internal excellence to win

In March first open shall be wise,
In days of peril firm and brave,

And wears an Emerald all her life,

And owes to June her day of birth,
With ring of Agate on her hand,

Those who in warm July are born,
Then will they be exempt and free

And life's vicissitudes must know,
But lay an Opal on her breast,

With drear November's fog and snow

24          The linden, in the fervors of July, Hums with a louder concert When the wind

Of gladness and of thanks

Do you recall that night in June
Upon the Danube River,
We listened to the landler-tune,
We watched the moonbeams quiver
CHARLES H. ALDÉ—Danube River

2
I gazed upon the glorious sky
And the green mountains round,
And thought that when I came to lie
At rest within the ground,
'Twere pleasant, that in flowery June,
When brooks send up a cheerful tune,
And groves a joyous sound,
The sexton's hand, my grave to make,
The rich, green mountain-turf should break.
BRYANT—June

3
What joy have I in June's return?
My feet are parched—my eyeballs burn,

But faint the flagging Zephyr springs,
With dry Macadam on its wings,
And turns me "dust to dust."

What a place to be in is an old library! It seems as though all the souls of all the writers that have bequeathed their labours to these Bodleians were reposing here as in some dormitory, or middle state.
